Bratislava is perceived by Slovak citizens as an expensive city. This result showed the July survey of TNS SK on a sample of 1 032 respondents. In particular as an expensive city it was perceived in the survey by 67.3% of those surveyed, i.e. more than two-thirds. Almost half of respondents (46.4%) believe that the city is big and one third (32.8%) consider it a fast one. For almost 30% of respondents Bratislava is a modern city; less than one quarter of those surveyed considered it a dirty city. Opinions of Slovak citizens are not identical with the views of Bratislava inhabitants. According to them is the capital city an aggressive and dirty, but also a romantic and comfortable.
